Dear Stan:

On January 21st the Woodrow Wilson Center will hold an evening dialogue on the subject of "The United States Constitution and Diplomacy." The discussion will explore the division of responsibilities and its consequences for the Executive and Legislative branches in the complex and crucial field of foreign relations. The speaker for the evening will be Dean Rusk, the former Secretary of State who is currently Samuel H. Sibley Professor of International Law at the University of Georgia; respondents will be Senator Richard G. Lugar of Indiana, who is a member of both the Foreign Relations Committee and the Select Committee on Intelligence; and Neil Sheehan, of The New York Times, currently a Fellow at the Wilson Center. I will moderate the discussion.

I write to invite you to this dinner and evening discussion with a small but broadly-based group of members of Congress, diplomats, leading policy-makers, members of the academic community and journalists. The dialogue is made possible through a grant from the Xerox Corporation.

The Center is located on the third floor of the Smithsonian Institution Building at 1000 Jefferson Drive, S.W. We meet for tea at 5:30 p.m. The speakers' formal presentations start promptly at 6:00. After a break at 7:15 for dinner, we reassemble at 8:30 for the general discussion in which the entire group is invited to participate. The evening's program concludes at 10:00. There is parking on Jefferson Drive in front of the building, and we also have a lot behind (south of) the building which can be entered from Independence Avenue. Please enter the building through the east door; a guard will direct you from there.

We hope that you will let us know as soon as possible whether you can join us. Please call Louise Platt or Cynthia Ely on 381-5989.

Sincerely,

James H. Billington
